SUBJECT INDEX

KEY

In using this index the following should be borne in mind:

1. Subjects, not words, have been indexed.
2. Abstracts, not merely their titles, have been considered in indexing.
3. The small superior numeral which accompanies each page number designates the fraction of the page in ninths in which the subject being indexed is first considered. The printed matter only, exclusive of page headings, has been thus subdivided.
4. "P" before a page number indicates that the abstract is of a patent.
5. The alphabetizing of index headings has been done on the basis first of that part which comes before the comma in such headings as Copper, metallurgy of and Phenol, p-nitro-. E. g., these headings come before the headings Copper compounds and Phenol condensation products, respectively.
6. Organic compounds are indexed on the basis of "parent compounds," or more accurately, "index compounds" (see Introduction), the names of substituent radicals following in alphabetical order. The system of naming organic compounds which has been used is outlined in the Introduction below. Esters and salts of organic acids are, in general, indexed under the names of the acids; notes in the index under the appropriate headings explain the few exceptions.
7. An asterisk (*) following the name of an organic compound entered in the index signifies that the name, or numbering, or both are the author's own and may not conform to the system of nomenclature used in this index. This sign is used where it has seemed inadvisable, owing to incomplete information, to attempt to make the name conform to the system, or where the author's name, differing widely from the one given to the compound by the indexer, is given as an extra entry.
8. A dagger (†), which follows the names of a few compounds, signifies that the entry is an extra one, the name being only slightly less favored than the one chosen for the other entry. The preferred name can be determined by reference to the Formula Index.

The desirability of making the index readily usable without the need of reference to an elaborate introduction has been held constantly in mind. Although an introduction seems desirable and should be helpful, nevertheless the index is dependent neither on the Key nor on the Introduction. Numerous cross references are given throughout the index, and notes appear in connection with certain headings. An examination of the Introduction, which follows, should be especially helpful to those interested in looking up organic compounds.

INTRODUCTION

General policy. The indexing of subjects, as opposed to word indexing, has been emphasized. This avoids omissions, scattering and unnecessary entries; with the abundant cross references used it means that one should be able to find all of the references on any subject with certainty and with a minimum of effort. The words used as subject headings or in modifying phrases are not necessarily to be found in the abstracts but an expression of the idea suggested will be found within or beginning in the ninth of the page designated by the small superior numeral following the page number. Chemical compounds have been named and entered systematically; the system used is outlined below. All new compounds and all elements, compounds and other substances for which new data are given have been indexed, with the single exception of new compounds for which no names or structures have been given. Such compounds are entered only in the Formula Index. The Subject Index is in no other respect altered because of the Formula Index.

Modifying phrases. In writing such phrases for the entries under any heading the words have been arranged so that the idea considered to be the most important is expressed at the beginning whenever feasible and this procedure, as well as the selection of the words for this purpose, has been governed by numerous formulated general principles and specific rules. E. g., "detection of" has been used consistently whenever correct at the beginning of the modifications in indexing subjects treated from a qualitative analytical point of view, instead of permitting a scattering under such additional phrases as "test for," "reaction for," etc., regardless of what words may have been used in the text. In the case of appropriate headings the selection of first words for modifications has been made on the basis of a definite system of classification. Under a few large headings two or more entries have been made on indexing a subject in a single abstract in case two or more ideas could be used equally well to start the modifying phrase. In alphabetizing modifying phrases prepositions at the beginning have been ignored.

References to fractions of the page. One can readily estimate ninths of a page with considerable accuracy by placing the fore or middle finger one-third of the distance from the top of the printed matter on the page and the thumb one-third of the distance from the bottom, a procedure very easily carried out.

Inorganic compounds. Simple inorganic compounds are entered under the usual names. In indexing compounds of iron, gold, copper and tin such headings as Iron sulfates, under which the "ous" and "ic" salts are entered, have been used rather than headings beginning with "ferric(ous)," "auric(ous)," "cupric(ous)," or "stannic(ous)." Acid salts, such as NaH_2PO_4 , are entered under such headings as "Sodium phosphates." With the exception of a few common compounds, such as carbon dioxide and carbon monoxide, compounds of a given element with another or with a definite radical, which differ only in valence relations, are grouped. E. g., the various oxides of nitrogen are grouped under the heading "Nitrogen oxides" and classified there. Complex inorganic compounds which cannot be given definite names satisfactory for indexing are usually indexed under the heading which represents the class of compounds concerned and under a heading beginning with the name of the significant element. E. g., dichlorotetraamminecobaltic chloride would be indexed under "Ammino compounds" and under "Cobalt compounds." The Formula Index, which follows the Subject Index, should be particularly helpful in locating complex compounds.

Organic compounds. The system used for naming and indexing organic compounds is the same as that in use starting with the 1916 volume. An explanation of it by Austin M. Patterson and Carleton E. Curran, who are its originators, has appeared in another journal of the Society.¹ The system is based on existing usage and follows this as far as is practicable, so that a great many familiar names are unaffected. Only the general principles will be given here, but in the index itself will be found abundant cross references and also notes under Alcohols, Ketones, etc., indicating how compounds of these classes are named.²

1. The "chief function" of a compound is expressed in the main part of the name wherever possible, and not as a substituent, thus: Pyrrolicarboxylic acid, not carboxypyrrole; ethyl alcohol or ethanol, not hydroxyethane; pentanone, not ketopentane.

2. In compounds of mixed function, the chief function is determined from the following order of precedence:³ "onium" compounds, acid (carboxylic first), acid halide, amide, imide, aldehyde, nitrile, ketone, alcohol, phenol, mercaptan, amine, imine, ether, sulfide (and sulfoxide and sulfone). Thus, hydroxybenzonitrile, not cyanophenol; aminophenol, not hydroxyaniline.

3. A multiple chief function is expressed where feasible as -diol, -dicarboxylic acid, etc., rather than as hydroxy-ol, carboxy-acid, etc. But amino and imino groups attached to cyclic bases are treated as substituents; as, aminopyridine.

4. The index compound should be as large, and the substituents as small, as is practicable in conformity with the above rules; as, ethylbenzene, not phenylethane. But such names as diphenylethane and triphenylcarbinol are exceptions. When the chief function is in a side chain attached to a complex nucleus, "additive" names are preferred in order to harmonize 1 and 4; thus, naphthaleneacetic acid, not naphthylacetic acid (with the result that the compound is indexed with other naphthalene derivatives instead of under acetic acid; see 5).

5. The main part of the name with its functional ending, if any, is placed first in the index, the names of substituents following; thus, chloroacetic acid would appear in the index as Acetic acid, chloro- and dihydroxyanthraquinone as Anthraquinone, dihydroxy-. The part thus placed first is called the "index compound"; it may or may not be the "parent compound" (in the second example the parent compound is anthracene).

6. Names in which two functions are expressed in the index compound, as propanolone, cyclopentanonecarboxylic acid, are avoided, except that a few very common ones, such as phenolsulfonic acid, are used (indicated by cross references).

7. The names of the substituent radicals in the name of a compound are arranged in alphabetical order, as, benzylethylmethylphenylammonium chloride. The number of radicals of each kind does not affect the order (e. g., benzyl precedes ethyl no matter how many of each are present); but the compound name of a substituted radical is treated as a unit with its own alphabetic position; thus dimethylamino, Me₂N-, follows benzyl but precedes ethyl. When the complete name has been formed, it is alphabetized as any other word.

8. Parentheses, brackets and even braces are used where necessary to mark off complex radical names.

9. Familiar methods of numbering are employed (Greek letters for acids, alcohols, etc., and for side chains; arabic numerals for Geneva names and rings). The numbering of complex nuclei is shown in the index under the parent compounds; it is practically identical with that of Richter's "Lexikon" so far as that work goes. For the more recently discovered forms the "Proposed International Rules for Numbering Organic Ring Systems"¹ have been adopted as a standard.

10. When two or more numberings are equally indicated that one is chosen which gives the smallest number or numbers for the chief function, then for double bonds if these must be regarded, then for triple bonds, then for point of attachment (doubled molecules), then for substituents.

11. Unnecessary numbers are avoided: thus, in Δ^1 -1-cyclohexanol the 1 is not needed because by the rules in paragraph 10 the OH group is assumed to be in position 1.

12. Numbers in parentheses are used to indicate the position of entering hydrogen necessary to the existence of the compound; thus, 4(3)-quinolone is equivalent to 3,4-dihydro-4-ketoquinoline.

13. Doubled molecules or radicals are indicated by names commencing with bi- (as, o,o'-biphenol, biphenyl, $\Delta^{4,4'}$ -bipiperidine). Bis- is used for like molecules united by a bivalent radical and for double complex expressions: as, methylenebisphenol, bis(dimethylamino)-.

In using the cross references, the general nature of many of them should be kept in mind; thus, the reference "Benzene, ethoxy-. See Phenetole" is applicable not only to this compound itself but to derivatives, which are indexed under it rather than under Benzene.

ORGANIC RADICALS

An extensive list of preferred names for organic radicals was given in the 1927 Index in a place corresponding to this and also in the Introduction of the Second Decennial Subject Index. With few exceptions they are the ones in common use. Attention is here called merely to the preferred names for some radicals having more than one name in the literature and to some radical names recently adopted.

RING INDEX

The following index of ring complexes is arranged as shown by the bold-face figures: 1-Ring Systems, with single figures indicating simple rings of 3, 5, etc., members; 2-Ring Systems, two figures denoting double rings of 3 and 4, 3 and 5, etc., members; then the triple and still more complex forms. Under each combination of figures the kind and number of atoms in the ring or rings are expressed in formulas. These formulas are arranged so that their initial rings are in the same order as in the Formula Index (see Key at the beginning of it). If the initial rings are alike the second rings of the formula are considered, and so on. By this means the reader will be able to learn the name used in the index for the simplest parent compound containing any particular ring or combination of rings and by turning to this name in the index he will find the compound listed and, perhaps, cross references to names of derivatives. Rings which are united but which have no atoms in common (e. g., biphenyl) and "spiro" compounds¹ which are characterized by two rings having but one atom in common are not regarded as ring complexes nor included in this index.

To illustrate: 6,6,6 $\text{C}_4\text{N}_2\text{-C}_6\text{-C}_6$ Benzophthalazine

Benzoquinoxaline

Phenazine

(1) This designates a complex ring of three components, each of six members; (2) the first is heterocyclic, containing four carbon atoms and two nitrogen atoms and the other two are carbocyclic rings of six atoms each; (3) parent compounds of this configuration will be found in the index under the three names given. If derivatives are indexed a structural formula will be found with the proper numbering and also appropriate cross references to derivatives having other common names, if any such are in the index.

It should be noted that the classification is made with reference to the smallest rings which, placed together, will constitute the plane formula. Thus hexamethylene-tetramine is treated as a 6,6,6 complex although a fourth six-membered ring (composed of atoms from the three six-membered rings) is also present.

 alkali hydrides as, 3561⁷.
 of aniline homologs, P 1420⁹.
 of aromatic amines, P 846⁴, P 4228¹. of C oxides, P 1415².
 of coal, 2806², 4323^{1,4}.
 of fluorene, 131¹.
 of hemins and porphyrins, 1414⁸.
 of hydrocarbons, P 2946⁴.
 of nitriles and oximes, P 2446⁶. of org. N compds., P 4709⁶. of petroleum, etc., P 4059². of piperic acid, 2432².
 of polyhydroxy compds., P 3232².
 of quinoline, 131¹, 132¹.
 under reduced pressure, 2421^{1,4}. of tars, 2018⁷.
 for hydrogenation and decompn. of aromatic compds., 3697¹.
 for hydrogenation and dehydrogenation of org. compds., P 4700⁶.
 for hydrogenation and reduction, etc., P 247¹. for hydrogenation (destructive), P 5031, P 2276^{2,3}. for hydrogenation (destructive) and dehydrogenation, P 1740¹. hydrogen ion as, in dehydration of ethylene glycols, 1109².
 for hydrogen transfer between org. compds., 4671⁴.
 for hydrolysis of PhBr and of PhCl in vapor phase, 4450¹.
 industrial use of, 1477².
 iodine and, 4714².
 iodine as, in decompn. of isopropyl ether, 4588².
 interaction on mixts. of CO and H₂, 2094², 5091¹.
 in decompn. of CO, 3620².
 in decompn. of CO, poisoning by certain substances, 1560⁹.
 in decompn. rate of NH₃ on, 2347².
 iron as, for chlorination of C₁₀H₈ in C₂H₄, 601².
 in decompn. of NH₃, 1803².
 in mixts. of CO and H₂, 3620². iron salts as, in oxidation of carbohydrates and polyhydric alcs., 1116¹.
 for maleic acid manuf., P 4712¹.
 for manuf. of org. oxygen compds., P 3231⁶.
 for mercaptan manuf., P 2188².
 for mercury diisobutyl prepn., 817¹.
 metal, prepn. of, P 3315².
 metals for use as, P 1728².
 in methane decompn., 1866⁷, 1867¹. for methane manuf., P 2191².
 for methanol manuf., P 155², P 851^{1,2}, 1385², P 1420², P 1651¹, P 1910², P 2449², P 3235², 3661², P 3716², P 4485¹, 4926². for methanol production, etc., P 1227¹.
 for methanol synthesis and decompn., 816¹.
 for methylations with CH₃N₃, 4189². of mutarotation, 4450².
 negative, prevention of spontaneous combustion of oily textile fibers with, 1519².
 nickel, P 1227¹.
 app. for reducing, 538².
 esp. for reducing or hydrogenating org. compds., P 1226².
 for hydrogenation, P 940².
 prepd. from NiCl₂, 4616².
 regeneration of Ni from, 4839².
 for splitting off of alcs. from acetals, 2416².
 nickel as, for hydrogenating oils, 4839².
 mechanism of, 4633².
 for reduction of geraniol and citronellal, 1867².
 nickel carbide as, for CH₄ synthesis, 1106².
 nickel salts as, in hydrogenation under pressure, 4604².
 for nitric acid synthesis, 3543².
 nitrogen oxides as, in oxidation of hydrocarbons by air, 4186².
 nitroso compds. as, in isomerization of o-nitrophenylpropionic esters, 1636¹.
 for olefin manuf., P 3715², P 4483¹.
 org., 2941².
 in org. chemistry instruction, 2094¹.
 org. compds. and enzymes as, 376².
 for org. reactions, app. for using, P 5193^{1,2}.
 for oxidation of EtOH, 4440². of furan, P 2724².
 of gases, P 5282².
 of H₂S of NH₃ liquor to sulfate, 5030¹.
 of CH₄ by means of O, 3620².
 of mineral oils, etc., P 4567².
 of nopinene and pinene, 3455².
 of org. compds., P 8457², P 2256², P 2721², P 2985², P 4482². of side chain in aromatic hydrocarbons, P 2166².
 Sn, B and their derivs. as, 2094². of SO₂, P 486², P 1998². of SO₂, etc., P 4306².
 of SO₂, platinized SiO₂ gels as, 5278². of PhMe to BzOH, 1631². palladized CaCO₃ as, for reduction of nitro compds., 4938².
 palladized charcoal as, for reduction of nitriles and oximes, 599².
 of phenol decompn. at high temps., 1629¹.
 in phosgene industry, activated charcoal as, 5015².
 in photography, poisoning of, 1069².
 photo-, sensitization and inhibition in presence of, in relation to absorption spectra, 40².
 for phthalic anhydride manuf., P 4231².
 piperidine as, 5176².
 platinum, P 1227².
 platinum as, in hydrogenation of phenol and naphthol ethers, 3673¹.
 platinum as, in hydrogenation of unsatd. Me esters, 1872². platinum black as, for reduction of aromatic nitro compds., 4198¹.
 platinum black as, for reduction of geraniol and citronellal, 5467².
 platinum black as, in hydrogenation of Me esters of highly unsatd. acids, 2586².
 platinum gauze, in NH₃ oxidation, 2347².
 poisons of, removal from gases, 3060².
 for polymerization of hydrocarbons, P 846². pore vol. of MnO₂, Cu oxide and their mixts., 22². porous metals, P 4185¹.
 pyridine as, in Perkin synthesis of cinnamic acid, 599².
 pyridine as, in prepn. of N,N-dimethyl-1-naphthylamine from α -C₁₀H₇NH₂ and Me₂SO, 2964².
 for pyrogenic decompn. of hydrocarbons, P 2278².

- for reaction: $\text{CO} + \text{H}_2\text{O} \rightleftharpoons \text{CO}_2 + \text{H}_2$, 1997⁷.
- for reaction of C_2H_2 and NH_3 , P 2185⁷, P 2188⁸.
- for reaction of CO and H_2O , P 2186³.
- for reaction of ketones with CH_3N_2 , 97⁸.
- for reactions such as that of CO with H or steam or in dehydrogenation, P 4306⁹.
- reactions with suspended, P 4756¹.
- reactivation of, app. for, P 5253¹.
- poisoned with S, P 5283¹.
- used for removing N oxides from H mixts., P 4307¹.
- used to free gases from N oxides, P 4542¹.
- for reduction and oxidation, P 1227⁴.
- for reduction of C oxides, P 604⁹, P 3934¹, P 4949².
- for reduction or hydrogenation, P 3782¹, P 4542².
- removal from resinous products, etc., P 1702⁸.
- retarding action of, on decompn. of H_2O_2 , 4398⁸.
- in revivifying used filter clay, 2284⁶.
- ruthenium salts as, in reduction of perchloric acid by HBr, 2347¹.
- selenium as, for Ca bisulfite pulping soln., 4341⁴.
- silica gel as, in decompn. of H_2O_2 and effect of AgNO_3 , 2639⁹.
- silver, synthesis of H_2O with, 1341⁸.
- soils as, toward H_2O_2 and iodides, 5532².
- for soln. of Cu in H_2SO_4 , 3845².
- in sulfuric acid industry, V compds. as, 5278⁹.
- for sulfuric acid manuf. by contact process, 934⁴, 1219².
- for sulfur removal from gases, P 3797⁴, P 4804⁹.
- for sulfur trioxide manuf., P 2251².
- for tautomerism of ethyl acetoacetate, 100⁶ theories and applications of, 4754³.
- for thiosulfuric acid conversion to polythionic acids, 1340⁶.
- treatment of gas mixts. by solid, app. for, P 2077³.
- tube for synthesis under high pressure, P 1534⁴.
- tungstic acid sol as photo., in reaction between glucose and H_2O_2 in acid medium, 4144³.
- for use in purifying chemicals for use in manuf. of products contg. active O., P 4515².
- vanadium, P 2792⁶.
- vanadium oxide, P 2256⁸, P 4305⁹.
- vanadium oxide as, in oxidation of benzene to maleic acid, 3442¹.
